Spring Summer 2025 Collection Balancing architecture and the human body

Inspired by the imposing structures of architecture and the sinuosity of the human body, Francesco Murano designs a collection of contrasts: sharp geometries intertwine with soft draperies in a continuous search for harmony. Sartorial cuts, precise and defined, give the silhouettes a strong structure, while the fluidity of the fabrics expresses lightness and movement. The unmistakable draping, the designer's stylistic signature, evolves, becoming three-dimensional and voluminous, resulting in garments that challenge the conventions of space.

A distinctive element of the collection is the belt, a changeable detail that changes following the different garments, declining in a soft version or structured leather. An accessory, more than a simple detail, becomes the key to understanding the designer's vision: a synthesis of form and function, which gives balance and definition to each garment, projecting the idea of a strong and conscious femininity.

The true conceptual heart of the collection is the "Möbius ribbon," an infinite form and leitmotif that wraps the body in an elegant and fluid embrace. At times the ribbon appears free and floating, almost ephemeral, but as the stylistic narrative unravels, the ribbon goes on to interact with the body, drawing sinuous lines around the pelvis and shoulders, transforming from a decorative element to an integral part of the structure. The result is a harmonious, sophisticated silhouette in which the concept of linearity is surpassed in favor of a cyclic form that enhances femininity in an eternal movement.

The color code explores the dialogue between contrasting tones: deep black and pure white are contrasted, while touches of red and mint green add a dynamic and unexpected energy.

The collaboration with LineaPelle, which represents the best manufacturers and therefore played a key role in the creation of the collection, is confirmed. The carefully chosen and masterfully used material becomes the tool with which Murano can shape its boldest and seemingly impossible visions.
